

Little EIFA Newsletter 3 February 2017

We have been busy in the class, with various interests from the children being followed and supported this week.

If you have not informed us of any absences over the school half term, please email. Thank you.

Une de nos activités principales est le travail quotidien sur les nombres.

Nous savons compter de plus en plus loin. Les enfants voient des nombres dans différents contextes et aiment penser "à celui qui vient après".

We are enjoying our music sessions, but songs are also part of our daily routine. The Wheels on the Bus is still very popular. In addition, the children are enjoying "Il était un petit homme" and continue to choose "Les petits poissons dans l'eau".

Lots of children have been interested in building this term and we have extended this with a construction site table to explore. It has been transformed over the week by the children's investigations. There were different textures to explore and mix in the beginning; there were differences in shades to talk about; and the construction vehicles had to set to work. This was supplemented with pictures and vocabulary. The table has been very popular. We will keep the investigation table and supplement it with scoops and numbers next week. Previously, one of the children had brought in a book called "The Goodnight Construction Site" to share and we will be enjoying some more related stories.

Les enfants ont aimé faire des traces et travailler sur des papiers/cartes de différentes tailles, individuellement ou en groupe.
